Overview

Is it morally acceptable to subject children to clinical research when they will not directly benefit? How should someone make medical decisions for someone who has never been competent? Does physician-assisted suicide violate professional boundaries for the virtuous physician? These questions and many more crop up in the vast field known as bioethics. With the parade of technological advancement, we are faced with a mounting number of difficult decisions and complex moral problems. In this course, we will examine key moral responsibilities of actors within the healthcare system and research fields. Through a combination of ethical theory and case studies, students will learn how to pick out morally salient facts, identify moral stakeholders, weigh conflicting interests, and recognize the moral residue that often accompanies resolutions.

Course Goals

 tô Develop critical thinking and writing skills, which for philosophy involves the following.
   ♦ recognizing the parts of arguments
   ♦ understanding how these parts work together to form a coherent argument
   ♦ critiquing the steps, reasoning, consistency, or validity of the argument as a whole ♦ inferring further implications of the argument, given your critique or other critiques that can be made tô Identify key historical events and movements that contributed to the development of bioethics as an academic field and practice tô Use rich moral language to unpack the nuances and complexities of moral problems in medicine and biotechnology tô Increase appreciation and awareness of the types of moral conflicts that can arise in the clinic and in research tô Apply philosophical concepts to real-world cases in medicine and biotechnology tô Compare, contrast, and analyze different positions of philosophers and other scholars and activists when it comes to central questions in bioethics
LOGISTICS
PHIL 105–03 will be meeting Tuesdays and Thursdays from 5:00 pm – 6:15 pm in Walsh 497.
Blackboard will be used for submitting assignments and accessing readings, but all other class materials and information will be on the course website.

DESCRIPTION OF ASSIGNMENTS

Participation. You are expected to participate regularly and thoughtfully. You should demonstrate that you have read the required material, and you should also engage with your classmates. If there are not enough people participating on a given day, I will give a pop quiz. In case you have been too quiet, you can improve your grade by contributing to the class blog on our website:

http://bioethics-spring2015.weebly.com/class-blog

Blog posts cannot be fully substituted for in-class participation, however.

Debate contribution. We will have an in-class debate on a topic related to the course material. You will work with a group of students to present a case for your side of the issue. The night before, you (each student) must submit 750 words on what you want to contribute to the debate. Some possible questions you can respond to as your contribution: What are the competing interests or obligations in this issue? How should the moral interests be weighed or understood? Based on your position, what is the most challenging aspect of resolving these ethical problems? What is a problem with one of the opposing views? Do not attempt to answer all of these questions in your paper. Focus on one particular ethical/philosophical aspect of the case that you will present with your team. Depth and thoughtfulness are more important than breadth. You should incorporate ideas, terms, or insights from course material.
Your contribution should clearly integrate at least one class reading and at least one debate reading. Check the course websites for more detailed instructions. Submit to Blackboard.

Short papers. You are required to write two short (1,000 words) papers based on prompts that I provide on the course website. The prompt can be on any readings that we have done up to that point. The point of these papers is to help you build your philosophical writing skills. Submit to Blackboard.

Case analysis. Using the ethics case work-up handout (separate document on course website), you need to methodically break down a clinical ethics case. Your analysis should conclude with a concrete recommendation for what the medical professionals should do to resolve the case. Put yourself in the shoes of a clinical ethicist called for guidance. The analysis should thoughtfully integrate at least two class readings and three outside readings. The case analysis should be 2,000 words and submitted to Blackboard. Check the course websites for more detailed instructions.

CLASS MATERIALS

REQUIRED:
All of the required readings will be available on Blackboard (http://campus.georgetown.edu).

RECOMMENDED:
Anthony Weston’s A Rulebook for Arguments

COURSE POLICIES

Attendance and tardiness. You are expected to attend class every day, and you should avoid tardiness. I will take roll daily. If you miss roll due to lateness, it is your responsibility to make sure that I have corrected the attendance sheet. If you need to miss class, you must e-mail me, preferably before the class meets. Keep in mind that sleeping in, fun local events, and work do not excuse you. You are only permitted two unexcused absences before points are deducted from your grade. You will lose one-third of a letter grade on your final grade for each unexcused absence after the first two (so ‘B+’ becomes a ‘B’ after one extra, ‘B+’ becomes a ‘B-’ after two extra, etc.). You must provide proper documentation for absences that you want excused. You only need to give me enough information for me to discern whether the excuse is legitimate and whether the documentation is adequate.
Late assignments. You must turn assignments in on time unless you are given permission to do otherwise. I will deduct a full letter grade for each day an assignment is late without a documented, legitimate excuse (e.g., an ‘A’ paper becomes a ‘B’ for one day late; an ‘A’ paper becomes a ‘C’ for two days late). The number of points deducted for a late paper will correspond to how many hours it is late (so 24 hours late = full letter grade off, 12 hours late = half letter grade off, etc.). It is your responsibility to make sure that your assignment has been uploaded successfully. It is conceivable that you will have multiple deadlines and stressors in the same week as you have a deadline for this course, but this is not grounds for asking for an extension. In the case of piling deadlines, I recommend that you work out an earlier deadline for your assignment for this course. Except in extraordinary circumstances, I will not grant extensions when the assignment is due in less than 24 hours. Keep in mind that the deadline applies even if you have computer trouble.

Paper length. You have 100-word leeway either way for papers. This means that (e.g.) your short papers must be between 900 and 1,100 words, or I’ll deduct points. How many points are deducted will depend on how much you go over or under the word limit. Same goes for the other assignments.

Anonymous grading. In order to ensure fairness in grading, all assignments will be graded anonymously. Students are required to make sure that their submitted assignments comply with instructions (on course website) to ensure blind grading. Students who do not follow instructions for anonymous grading are subject to a two-third letter grade deduction on their assignment (e.g., an ‘A’ becomes a ‘B+’). For these students, I will still clear their papers of all identifying information long before they are graded. I will not know whose paper is whose until all papers for that assignment are graded and are returned to the students.

Proper resources. All research materials should be appropriate for college-level assignments. This means that blogs (generally), Wikipedia, and other similar sites should not be used as the basis for any assignment. You need to cite all sources you consult or use. Contact me if you are unclear whether a particular source counts as proper. The Bioethics Research Library (Healy 102) has excellent staff and materials.

Citations. All of your work must be cited correctly. You can use any official method, such as MLA, APA, or Chicago. Points will be deducted for omissions, serious errors, and repeated mistakes. Your case analysis should include a bibliography.

Cell phone use. Your cell phones should be turned off when class begins.
Laptops. You are permitted to use your computer in class, but only for class purposes. If you become a laptop zombie in class, I will email you with a polite warning. Repeated abuses of your laptop privilege will result in my prohibiting you to bring it to class anymore.

Drafts and outlines. I will not look at drafts over e-mail or in office hours. However, you can bring in or send short outlines. I do not accept attachments, so you will need to copy and paste your text into the body of an email.

Appealing grades. It is within your rights as a student to ensure that your grades fairly reflect the quality of your work. If you believe you deserve a higher grade on an assignment, you need to send me a list of concrete reasons for appealing your grade. I will then take 24 hours to review your work, and I will either keep your grade as is or raise it. After you have completed this step, you can appeal to my teaching mentor if desired. My mentor can give you a higher or a lower grade, depending on his judgment of your work.

Georgetown Honor System

Plagiarism. Any piece of work submitted to this class that bears your name is presumed to be your own original work that has not previously been submitted for credit in another course unless you obtain prior written approval to do so from your instructor. In all of your assignments, all borrowed words, ideas, and paraphrases from other individuals (published, printed, or expressed in any medium) must be properly attributed. Proper attribution requires that all sources you consult or use have been fully identified in a footnote, endnote, or bibliography. It is considered plagiarism and a violation of academic honesty to pay any person or any service for assignments, in whole or in part. If you are unclear about what constitutes plagiarism or how to give proper attribution, contact the instructor before any assignment is submitted.

Academic honesty. As signatories to the Georgetown University Honor Pledge, and indeed simply as good scholars and citizens, you are required to uphold academic honesty in all aspects of this course. You are expected to be familiar with the letter and spirit of the Standards of Conduct outlines in the Georgetown Honor System and on the Honor Council website. As faculty, I too am obligated to uphold the Honor System and will report all suspected cases of academic dishonesty.

Standards of Conduct. http://gervaseprograms.georgetown.edu/honor/system/53519.html
If you have a disability or believe you might and would like to receive accommodations in my course, then you should contact the Academic Resource Center (arc@georgetown.edu) to register as a student with a disability or for an evaluation referral. You should do this at the beginning of the term. The Academic Resource Center is the campus office responsible for reviewing documentation provided by students with disabilities and for determining reasonable accommodation in accordance with the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and University policies. The Center is located on the third floor of the Leavey Center, Suite 335. You may access their website at http://ldss.georgetown.edu.

Please consider taking advantage of the resources of the Writing Center. The Writing Center provides one-on-one peer tutoring focused on improving your writing skills. I encourage you to take your paper drafts to the Writing Center. Visit http://writingcenter.georgetown.edu for more information. You can also schedule an appointment with a Writing Center tutor online on the center’s website.

All readings should be completed by the day they are listed.
